WHAT'S GOING ON

Reflections Caught on the Mirror of Sanford Life Today

(A Weekly Feature)

Thursday's announcement by the Board of County Commissioners that the election on bonds to provide better roads would be indefinitely postponed was a bolt from the blue. The county had gone to considerable expense advertising the issue. We certainly hoped to see it passed but the resolution calling it off passed unanimously seems to have buried it by the use of the word "indefinitely."

The new head of the credit bureau, Mr. Smith, formerly of Miami, arrived in the city this week. Our best wishes, Mr. Smith! Yours is a jib, (a job, not a position) requiring acute judgment, rare tact, and a great deal of personal worth.

Mayor Forrest Lake is back on the job after a trip of two weeks to points north. Misapprehension as to geographical extent of the devastated Florida area seems somewhat prevalent in the north, according to the Mayor. Mr. Lake did all that he could while away correcting the mistake with the people he met, but this seems to be a task that requires systematic effort. What about some publicity combating the spread of this dangerous misinformation, Chamber of Commerce?

A Pleasing Prospect In Seminole

Schools in Sanford and other towns of the county have gotten under way in fine shape. Enrollment is good, and while there is a little crowding in some of the schools, we, who used to be a school teacher, sympathize with the principal of the county schools, when he says that such a handicap is one that teachers are more often than not saddled with.

Baumel's Fashion Show at the Milane Friday night was a revelation and a delight to the large audience, proving once more that you don't have to shop away from Sanford to be well-dressed.

The Sanford Times has become a real newspaper under the leadership of Charles Britt, (known to his intimates as "Britt-bane"), Duncan Hasel, and Louis Graft, the Kentucky Colonel. We've heard rumors of a Sunday morning edition soon,

A MOMENTARY CHECK

Rehabilitation of the storm-stricken area of South Florida is progressing steadily, and while it will be many months before all traces of the devastation wrought will be removed, the courage and energy with which the citizens are working indicate that from the ruins will rise cities even better and more beautifully built.

On a recent trip to a southern state farther north the writer was asked if the terrific damage done to the buildings was not at least partly due to haste and flimsiness in the construction. This may have been the case in a few instances, but the example of the Myer-Kizer sky-scraper proves that the allegation is untrue.

The Myer-Kizer structure was a year in building, and was formed according to the best principles of engineering and architecture, fabricated from steel with poured concrete and this building was so bent and twisted by the force of the gale that it leans at a precarious angle. Had this building been poorly constructed, it would have fallen, and the mighty mass would have crushed under it people to almost double the present casualty list.

Finer structures than even these will take the place of those that have gone in all parts of the region hit, authentic press reports indicate.

The health situation is under the control of the doctors working there, and the menace of an epidemic of disease seems to have been removed by their efficient work.

Florida is a great state, one of two in the union without a state debt, and it would take a storm of ten times the destroying power to more than momentarily halt her march to bigger things.

Recent reports from Miami and other cities indicate that programs outlined in the matter of conventions and the like before the storm are going ahead as planned, and that progress has been but temporarily retarded or not stopped.

Questions were also asked of the writer as to what effect the storm would have and the general situation. The answer was practically none, and the perceptible and increasing stream of incomers already passing through and stopping in Sanford, the estimates of agricultural production, are bearing out the reply.

As for Sanford and Seminole county, the effect is nil. What few tourists will fail to make their usual Florida trip will be made up by the additional number of the timorous who will stop here.

What Sanford must worry about is where to put them. Houses for rent are scarce, and those for sale are none too numerous.

It is safe to say that were there five hundred homes here for rent, homes in which the quarters were at least liveable and the surroundings attractive, not one would be empty by the end of November.

FAMOUS PROSE AND HUMOR

Usually one thinks of the work of the famous authors of long ago as beautiful stuff, but that which comes down to us is of a little too solid stuff for easy digestion. Those old fellows had a sense of humor remarkable for its freshness today. If you don't believe it, read some of the appended anecdotes and stories.

In a small town out west an ex-county judge is cashier of a bank.

"The check is all right, sir," he said to a stranger, "but the evidence you offer in identifying yourself as the person to whose order it is drawn is scarcely sufficient."

"I've known you to hang a man on less, judge," was the stranger's response.

"Quite likely," replied the ex-judge, "but when it comes to letting go cold cash we have to be more careful."

Of the countless good stories attributed to Artemus Ward, the best one, perhaps, is that which he tells of the advice which he gave to a railroad conductor soon after the War between the States. The road was in a wretched condition, and the trains were consequently run at a phenomenally low rate of speed. When the conductor was punching his ticket, Artemus remarked:

"Does this railroad allow its passengers to give advice, if they do so in a respectful manner?"

The conductor replied in gruff tones that he guessed so.

"Well," went on Artemus, "it occurred to me that it would be well to detach the cowcatcher from the front of the engine and hitch it to the rear of the train, for you see that we are not liable to overtake a cow, but what's to prevent one from strolling into this car and biting one of the passengers?"

Hardly to be called humorous, the unusual quality and depth of the following epitaph written by Benjamin Franklin for himself makes it worth while reading and pondering on:

LITTLE PICTURES FROM SOCIETY THE FASHIONS

(By Bobbie Chapman)

Much activity has been noticeable in local society circles during the past week despite the full program of relief work entered upon by all women's organizations. Subscription of funds and supplies for refugees of south Florida in the morning—brodge parties and showers in the afternoon and evening supply a full day for the most energetic.

Mrs. Clarence McCrome, pleasantly remembered as Miss Alberta Aycocke, was the recipient of a lovely social courtesy Thursday when a number of her friends gathered at a bridge shower given by Miss Maud Tyre and Mrs. R. F. Wilson at the home of the bride's mother on Myrtle avenue.

Miss Mina Howard entertained at a pretty party Tuesday at her attractive country home, the guest list including the members of her bridge club and a few extra players.

Of interest to the many present, and soon-to-be professional women of Sanford, are plans now under way to form a working woman's club to function for the benefit of all concerned. School teachers are especially invited to enter the proposed organization, which bids fair to soon become a potent factor in the life of the community.

The Woman's Guild of Holy Cross Episcopal Church met at the home of Mrs. A. P. Connelly last Monday for a discussion of routine business and methods of subscribing relief money for the citizens of storm swept areas.

Kiddies the town over will welcome the announcement that Saturday Story Hours at the Municipal Library are to begin today. Last season these sessions were well attended and all indications point toward increased popularity this year.

Fashion designers continue to draw inspiration from the jungle, a sporty chiffon velvet brocade gown showing spots of velvet so arranged that the whole suggests a leopard's skin. Skirts this season will remain practically the same length as those of last year, according to late reports from those who are supposed to know.

Mrs. Dick Brown entertained the St. Agnes Guild Girls at her home on Highland avenue last week, Mrs. Monroe Hutton, president of the class, presiding. A number of routine matters were disposed of.

The many friends of Mrs. Rush St. John, better remembered as Miss Julia Zachary, will be pleased to learn that she contemplates a month's visit with her family here while conditions at Miami, her adopted city, return to normalcy.

Twenty-five enthusiastic members of the Pipe Organ Club of the First Baptist Church met at the home of Mrs. Francis Bolz on Park avenue last week for a discussion of plans relative to the annual Christmas bazaar to be given by the organization in the first part of December.

The first of the fall dances at the City Hall, scheduled for tonight, is being awaited with much interest by local dancing people.

Chamber of Commerce Activities

Existing freight rates to Sanford and possibilities for an early acquisition of still more favorable rates were discussed from many angles at the weekly meeting of the commercial body yesterday, several of the members advancing valuable suggestions for the consideration of the New Industries Committee, headed by Col. George W. Knight.

George D. Bishop, who has given considerable study to rail transportation problems in Florida, sounded the key note of the present rate situation in a letter advising the Chamber of immediate possibility of Sanford losing the benefits of its water rate to the sea as a result of a recent special commodity rate granted Orlando, with application to a wide range of merchandise shipments.

Mr. Bishop rightly concluded that if Sanford remains inactive while the Inter-State Commerce Commission is preparing its new revision of freight rates from northern states to central and south Florida points, avoiding Jacksonville, Sanford is more than likely to lose special rates that should apply to this point when the new municipal docks are completed and water transportation assumes serious proportions.

James L. Wells, local commercial agent of the Atlantic Coast Line, and M. B. Hutton, contractor, discussed the subject from several viewpoints, Mr. Hutton contending that a traffic expert with offices at Sanford would help materially in solving the numerous rate scale problems beyond the ability of the average layman.

Exaggerated reports of the Florida hurricane clipped from Asheville papers were forwarded to the commercial body by S. O. Chase, and following some discussion members of the organization voted to address letters to the Asheville commercial body and the national Chamber of Commerce giving authentic accounts of storm damage, and telling of preparations now being now made for the entertainment of more tourists than ever.

A note of optimism was sounded by Mayor Forrest Lake, who returned from New York City yesterday in company with George DeCottes. Mr. Lake told of confidence in Florida existing in big financial circles, and predicted a tremendous winter hegira of tourists. The Hulick Brothers, Mr. Lake said, plan to open the Forrest Lake Hotel between November 15 and Thanksgiving Day.

CHAMBER PRESIDENT ELECTED

Postmaster C. I. Matthews was elected president of the Longwood Chamber of Commerce at a meeting held Wednesday for the purpose. Mr. Matthews succeeds Fred A. Clark, who resigned when he and his family moved away from there.

Wade S. Entzinger spoke to the meeting on new industries coming to the town and general manager John H. Ganzel spoke of the reorganization of the golf factory.

WHAT SEMINOLE COUNTY IS DOING

NOTES FROM THE COUNTY

OVIDO

Members of the Philathea and Baraca classes of the Baptist church gave their pastor, the Rev. J. Max Cook, and his family, a very delightful pounding of good things to eat Friday evening. Home-made cakes and punch were also brought, and a most delightful evening was spent with music and games.

The following members of the Baptist church attended their annual associational meeting held at Daytona Beach Tuesday of last week: The Rev. and Mrs. J. Max Cook; the Rev. and Mrs. J. N. Thompson; Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Farnell, and Mrs. J. William Martin.

Oviedo will get the returns from the World's Series games daily play by play. A cardboard diamond has been improvised on which the position of the players in the field and the runners as they advance will be indicated by cards bearing the names of the players.

Radio will be used, the receiving being done over the set of C. L. West, set up in his store. WDBO at Winter Park is the sending station from which the news will be taken.

Much interest has been manifested in the town over the outcome. Last year the news was received by leased telephone relaying the news from Sanford.

Nelson and Company have received a chemical treatment plant for the preservation of citrus fruit, and the machinery is now being installed. A box-making machine designed to take the place of hand labor has also been received and will be set up shortly.

LONGWOOD

Claying and laying of rock on the Seminole Boulevard, leading to the race track, is going on nicely.

A weiner roast given by Caryll and Jackson at the San Lando pool to customers of the grocery firm Monday night was a complete success. About fifty guests were present, and swimming, games and dancing were thoroughly enjoyed.

CHULUOTA

To aid the storm sufferers Chuluota citizens collected $110 in cash and clothing estimated at $70. The money and garments were forwarded to the Red Cross at Sebring.

Among recent realty transfers the sale by J. Frank Story of ten acres of land to Mr. Davis, of Orlando, is of interest. Mr. Davis is clearing and dynamiting in preparing the land for the planting of orange trees.

Mrs. Viola Jacobs, whose father, James Blackburn, of Chuluota, died recently, has received a copy of a memorial resolution passed by her dead father's home Masonic lodge in Falmouth, Kentucky.

Mr. Slater is managing the farm for Mrs. Jacobs.

an old-fashioned pound party was tendered the Rev. and Mrs. James Thompson at their new home on Crystal Lake avenue by members of the congregation of Lake Mary Community church on Monday evening. This was a most enjoyable occasion and well attended.

The evening passed quickly with music and singing, after which refreshments were served. Much amusement was caused by the opening of the "pound packages," which included everything from grits to roses.

The Rev. Thompson was sent here by the Presbyterian board the first of last April, and both he and Mrs. Thompson have won the best wishes of the entire community, resulting in the rapid growth of the Community church and its organizations. He is largely instrumental in the plans now under way for constructing a new and modern church at Lake Mary, work on which is expected to start shortly.

Four new houses are under construction in Lake Mary.

A twenty-four inch drain pipe has just been put into operation to drain Crystal lake, which is expected to keep this lake at an even level.

Donations are being received by Lake Mary Chamber of Commerce for the East Coast Relief fund, and the amount is nearing the two hundred dollar mark.

The Lake Mary school opened Monday, September 27 with an enrollment crowding close on one hundred, or about double the number of last year. Principal Clarence Priest, Mrs. Fannie Bell Priest and Miss Lucie Echols are efficiently straightening out the tangles incident to the first few days of the school year and everything will soon be in good running order. It is worthy of note that our eighth grade numbers 19 so far in contrast to one last year.

Gene Stratton Porter's
Famous Novel
"Laddie"

AMUSEMENT
A Big Week In

MILANE AND PRINCESS HA

THIS WEEK AT THE MILANE

Out of the great flood of so-called "program" pictures that flows steadily throughout the theatres of the country, there occasionally appears a film so note-worthy in theme, so vivid in characterization, so appealing in sympathy and understanding that it stands far above the surface of the flood.

Such a picture is the screen version of "Laddie,"—Gene Stratton Porter's best-known novel. Produced and directed by the famous novelist's son-in-law, Leo Meehan, who has cleverly retained all of the color and imaginary of the book, the result is a delight to appreciative audiences.

In the cast is little Gene Stratton, granddaughter of the author, and who will be remembered for her genuineness as the tom-boy girl in "The Keeper of the Bees," a picturization of another great porter novel. Incidentally, the girl bids fair to emulate the tremendous success of her grand-mother, having at twelve years of age published a book of verse.

In the cast also are John Bowers and Bess Flowers, not to mention good old David Torrence.

The basic theme of the picture is that a man is still a gentleman, even though he is a farmer. Laddie, a true son of the soil, is in love with Pamela, the lovely daughter of an English reclusive. Pamela, while appreciating him as a friend, cannot see him in any other light as long as he insists on staying at the farm. To further complicate matters, Laddie's sister is enamored of a man who turns out to be—No we are not going to tell you, who has been—we are not going to tell you that, either, people of Sanford.

All the mighty appeal of Gene Stratton Porter at her best and greatest—all the marvelous knowledge of humanity and life—of love and laughter—of poignant sorrow and joyous exaltation with which her works are imbued—all that she gave to the world is contained in "Laddie."

We had the privilege of seeing the screen rendition of the "Keeper of the Bees" and knowing that "Laddie" is an even bigger photoplay hit, no one ought to miss seeing it at the Milane Monday night.

We, for one—somehow that doesn't sound right, but anyway we for one are not going to let business interfere with that pleasure Monday. Don't you either.

as ever. We remember him from "Way Down East" and ever since then we've hated him. He was such a scoundrel that we also remember wishing we were a waiter so we could put that dope used to spray celery, in his soup. But he gets his and that's not the best news either.

It's Florence Vidor, "the orchid lady of the screen," the eternal woman, who plays the lead as the star of a Russian vaudeville troupe, loved by her partner, who proves his worth as well as his accuracy with a knife. The secret's out, that's how he did it!

We wouldn't lose any money if we were to drop in at the Milane Tuesday, you'll see all the gruesome details. Not only that, but you'll see a genuine Russian vaudeville troupe with divertissements not known to the American stage.

We wouldn't lose an ymoney if we were to wager that many a Sanford husband will write out a check to the Blue Bird Beauty Shoppe or to some other hair dressing establishment after frierd wife sees the new hair bob Dorothy Mac-Kaill wears in "Subway Sadie," at the Milane Wednesday. Oy, Oy! and when they see the fashion show, what they're going to wear this fall and winter in New York, it's "bye, bye, bank account! Keep 'em at home that night, is our advice.

But read up on Jiggs and find out how he slips away so that you can use one of his dodges that night. We're going to tell you something in confidence. Dorothy's our screen sweetheart! Don't you get fresh and go too far, howsoever, for we haven't broken the news to the lady yet. It's a good thing nobody knows who writes this, or else we might have to waste a moonlit Florida evening explaining to our Magnolia avenue sweetheart.

To get back to business, "Subway Sadie" is a scintillating comedy, and yet it's simple, natural, and sweet, and you oughtn't to miss it.

A battle of tongues this time, and as usual the woman won. It wasn't in the kitchen, either, nor anywhere at home. The court room was the scene this time, and Norma Shearer proves her versatility once more as the triumphant lawyer in "The Waning Sex," at the Milane Thursday. See it. Mr. DeCottes and Mr. Wilson, you may be up against Mrs. Leonardi sometime.

Calling for a range of emotions from whimsical drollery to passion and self-reliance, the role of the beautiful and brainy woman attorney could have been handled convincingly by no one but Shearer. She has a double fight,

We have been quite busy this week getting ready for the first football game of the season to be played with Leesburg Saturday. We have a fast team and an excellent chance to trim Leesburg. Football season tickets are for sale and also student season tickets for all the athletic games. Everybody get one and help support our team.

Fred Cottingham of Longwood, who attended school here last year, was a visitor Monday.

Our orchestra has been organized and had their second practice Wednesday afternoon.

The Choir has not been successful so far in organizing, but we hope to get together soon. We lost several members last year but there are many new ones who want to join and a good choir should result.

It has been rumored that "Spink" Dutton has stopped school and is going to New York. We are all sorry to lose "Spink." His good work on the football field will certainly be missed as well as his cheerful smile. From all reports a certain girl in the Junior class will not be very cheerful over his going.

We are to play our first game ever played by Sanford High in Soccer Friday afternoon at Leesburg. Around thirty boys were practicing soccer Wednesday afternoon. We have two of the best coaches in the state and with their help, should have a fine team.

Dr. Hamilton Holt, president of Rollin's College, spoke to us Wednesday morning on his very interesting experiences with some of the boys in France during the war. He finished his talk with a very charming fable pointing out the necessity of the United States joining the League of Nations.

Don't forget the football game Saturday—Come on, everybody! Let's root for Sanford!

BAUMEL'S FASHION REVUE DELIGHTFUL

Indicative of the quality of Sanford's shops and a truly delightful exhibition of feminine fashions was the Revue presented at the Milane theatre Friday night. With accessories furnished by three other Sanford Shops, it was proof conclusive that what you can get elsewhere, can be gotten here.

Acting as marionettes in presenting the modes were several Sanford matrons and misses, the misses included all ages from five to the age when a miss ceases to be a miss.

Last night's performance was also a revelation in the matter of local theatrical talent, the six numbers on the program all being loudly encored.

The display of the individual modes was carried out smoothly on a stage artistically decorated in blue and gold. Exquisite furniture softly shaded by orange-colored lamps, and draped around the chairs brilliant Spanish shawls carried out the color scheme.

Among other appearances, that of Mrs. G. E. Tucker was notably attractive in a black satin dress with a fringe cape effect and having fringe around the bottom of the gown.

Particularly stunning was Miss Margaret Cowan's display of a fleche-crepe evening gown, heavily beaded and with a transparent hem, in combination with a Nile-green Spanish shawl.

An evening gown of cerise, having a straight-line appearance with a sequin-border hem line, embroidered in gold, was an exquisite gown worn charmingly by Miss Margaret Davis. With this gown she wore a two-toned velvet cape, deeply fringed with chinchilla fur collar.

A striking appearance was presented by Mrs. Hazel Coleman in a black gown of Peggy Paige design, with a scalloped hem and faced in Valencia blue. An imported blue hat with trimmings and a soft blue ostrich bow setting off the dress struck the predominating notes and added to its beauty.

Showing a dress of black crepe, with peccant sleeves and braided in contrasting colors on the sleeves and pockets, Miss Helen Marett presented an unusual charming appearance. She wore a red velvet hat.

Wonderfully charming was the appearance of Mrs. Victor Robinson in a jungle green satin dress with embroidered cuffs, yokes and sleeves. With this new blouse model she wore an extremely high-crowned hat of jungle green. Furs and beaded bags were worn by the models throughout.

The beauty of the accessories was warmly praised by Mr. Baumel. Footwear was furnished by Lloyd Shoe store; furniture by Miller Furniture Co. and diamonds by H. C. Vile.

Interspersed with the appearances of the models was a series of entertainers. Miss Ruth Martin gave a humorous recitation that was well-liked, and several appearances were demanded from Miss Virginia Dickey of an exhibition of toe and gymnastic dancing beautifully done. Vocal solos rendered by Mrs. Robertson were as popular with the audience.

Charleston dancing by the Misses Martha Schiffley and Sally Fletcher was well-done, while the Dixie Male Quartette drew four or five encores. S. S. Baumel himself appeared in a song dance and shuffle appreciated immensely by the large crowd.

Baumel is to be congratulated on the newness and beauty of his fashions, and also on the remarkable performance which went over so smoothly last night.

MUSIC LOVERS TO HAVE UNUSUAL TREAT

Faculty of Sanford School of Music to Give Joint Recital

Unusually good music will be heard at the music recital to be given by the faculty of the Sanford School of Music to be held Tuesday night under the auspices of the Daughters of Wesley at the High School auditorium at eight o'clock.

Each member of the faculty is an artist in his line and Sanford is fortunate to have these artists among her citizens. They have taken part in concerts given in many of the largest cities in the United States and each time have been given wonderful words of praise in the newspapers.

Donald Jonson, pianist, in whom Paderewski, the world-famed pianist has taken so much interest, and who studied for some time with Sigismund Stojowski, is declared one of the finest pianists in this part of the country. He possesses much talent, musical understanding, and despite a natural handicap which permits only the use of fingers on the right hand, plays with much ease, difficult numbers.

Garnett Hedge, the tenor, has a voice of remarkable sweetness and power, which he handles with utmost ease, taking the highest tones without any apparent effort. He is unquestionably an artist deserving of the highest laurels, and to hear him sing is to forget all trouble and worry of life. His manner is unaffected and direct and it is much pleasure to watch him as to hear him sing, a combination not often found in a professional singer.

The third member of the faculty, Harve Clemens, violinist, whose brilliant playing will be one of the features of the evening. Mr. Clemens' broad phrasing and superb sympathetic interpretations, as well as brilliant technique, show at once his profound study and experience as a soloist.

Following is the program:

The Dog and the Bees

A dog being very much annoyed by bees ran quite accidentally into an empty barrel lying on the ground, and looking out at the bung-hole, addressed his tormentors thus:

"Had you been temperate, stinging me only one at a time, you might have got a good deal of fun out of me. As it is, you have driven me into a secure retreat; for I can snap you up as fast as you come into the bung-hole. Learn from this the folly of intemperate zeal."

When he had concluded, he awaited a reply. There wasn't any reply; for the bees had never gone near the bung-hole; they went in the same way he did and made it very warm for him.

The lesson of this fable is that one cannot stick to pure reason while quarreling with bees.

❖ "MOCCASIN JEANNE" ❖

A Novelette of Seminole County
By ARTHUR ROWLAND

Chapter Three

Three weeks before the Great Wind swept over Southern Florida and had left Jeanne's home a relic of desolation and ruin, the night train from the north was late arriving at Sanford. Railway employees anxiously paced the station platform waiting for the long whining whistle used by southern trains to announce their coming and clear the road at the same time.

Finally, forty-five minutes late, she roared in, clamping breaks on two score wheels screamed as the engineer made a quick stop.

The station master was already at the center of the train as the conductor jumped off. "What's wrong?" he asked.

Motioning his questioner to follow him, the conductor walked rapidly to the rear car of the train. He said nothing on the short hike, save a muttered expression, "always some crazy folks on every train. Never knew it to fail."

Reaching the end of the rear car he stopped, and turned abruptly to his companion.

"You'll have to help me," he said. "I've got a man and woman in here that I've had to lock up for the last two hundred miles."

"Drunk?"

"No, just plumb nuts."

He led the way up the steps and opened the rear door. There on a seat in a Pullman compartment sat two persons as little resembling each other in appearance and station in life as any two individuals could. The man was unkempt, unshaven, small. His face was pinched and covered with brown scars; his eyes nervous, constantly glancing from one side to the other.

By his side, perhaps two feet away, a girl. Her hair marvelous blond, was bobbed with a nicety that showed the most painstaking attention. She had a strong face, a face where one read positive self-confidence, a firm mouth, eyes that levelled directly into yours. She wore a blue serge suit showing she had come thru from the north.

The girl was the first to speak.

"Well, conductor, what next?" There was a cherry note in her voice.

The station agent stared.

The conductor cleared his throat. "There is not any next," he answered gruffly, "except you can go now, and I hope I'll never see either of you again. A few more spells by your friend here and he won't need any trains to carry him around anyway."

"You're a fool," snapped back the girl. She put her arm gently around her companion and he rose slowly to his feet. He too, for a moment faced the conductor and spoke—"It ees not of your business, M'sieur."

"Give me a lift," said the conductor, turning toward the station master. "This man is nearly helpless."

So together they carried the stranger to the platform; the girl walked beside, holding his hand. It was a weird little procession which continued on to the taxi stand.

As the machine whizzed off down Ninth street, the station master grabbed the arm of the conductor who was hastening back to his train.

lated, "what's all this anyway? What is the matter with them? How did they delay the train?"

His answer came in fits and starts as they hurried. "Dope fiend;—tried to jump off the train;—did get almost off once;—set emergency;—that got stuck; crazy fools; but, gosh, what a pretty girl;—all aboard!"

A swinging jump on the steps,—sharp ringing of the engine bell,—the train was making up time on its way south.

The taxi turned down Park avenue and stopped at a rooming house not far from Second street. If the excited station master and the energetic conductor could have seen the succession of incidents as the taxi stopped, their heart throbbing would probably have still further speeded up.

For without the slightest apparent trouble, the man stepped from the taxi, turned and gave his arm to the girl, and together they went to the door of the house, walking rapidly. The taxi driver paid no attention to the transformation. In fact a question would have arisen as to whether he was a taxi driver at all. For the benefit of our readers we will assure you that neither this man nor this machine had ever been in Sanford before this night.

The door quickly opened at their knock. Someone had obviously been expecting them. As the door closed behind them, the taxi, or whatever this machine really was, started at high speed down along the Orlando road. There was no moon and the bright lights pierced intense darkness as the machine raced on.

Just before reaching Longwood, the driver turned off on the road to Oviedo, a narrow brick path through the hammock land and undeveloped paradise of Seminole county. At Oviedo he turned sharply to the left and hurried on nine more miles to Geneva. High water had made this circuitous route necessary.

At Geneva right again, slower now;—picking his way cautiously and finally over rough and rutty paths to the shores of Lake Harney. As his lights reflected on the little windows of the Manton cabin, Jeanne's father and uncle came hurriedly out. The three chatted for a few moments; not even the nightbirds or the croaking frogs could have heard. These men hardly trusted the solitude of the forest.

Ten minutes later, the car had turned back; lights in the cabin had been extinguished.

Nor had Jeanne been seen by either of the three.

not only by the Times, but by the Herald too. Whoop it up, boys!

Seminole breezes are going to be laden with some beautiful music Tuesday night, and not from a radio loud speaker either. Under the auspices of the Daughters of Wesley, a recital of vocal and instrumental, melody will be given by the talented and well-trained faculty of the Sanford School of Music. At the Sanford High School, 8:15 P. M.

BAPTIST CHURCH NOTES

Sunday morning the subject of the sermon of Dr. King's will be "Some Entries in the Book of Life." At the evening service "The Folk Who Forgot God," will be the subject.

Interest in the Sunday school is improving rapidly. This was shown last Sunday by an attendance of over the five hundred mark. This Sunday a goal of 600 has been set by the officers of the school and a cordial invitation to strangers to meet with us at 9:30 is extended.

Seventeen additions to the church membership was a fine record of this church for the month of September. These new members means more strength to the working force of the church to combat the evils of the city.

The Sunday school can proudly boast of the excellence of their orchestra. If you are a stranger in the city, you will appreciate this music Sunday morning.
